Choosing Your Style Rifle

Choosing a style of rifle that best suits your needs can be easy or nerve racking! The first thing is to remain focused on what you truly will be doing with your rifle and not what you hope to be doing 10 years down the road. I've found that this little bit of advice helps people to make a more sound decision that they won't regret 6 months down the road when they're deer hunting in a swamp with a 15 lb. 1000 yard fly killer!

Please remember that Patriot Arms is a true custom rifle building company. What this means to you is that we would be honored to build you whatever kind of rifle that you desire as long as it's feasible. Whether you're setting your sights on a distant piece of paper or dreaming of stalking into position on a cape buffalo.....have a large budget...or smaller budget.....Patriot Arms can help you to reach your overall goal of a higher performing firearm!

The light weight rifle is our most popular choice for hunters who typically don't shoot over 300 yards and want a handier rifle for climbing into tree stands etc. These rifles have a #3 taper barrel and typically weigh 7-8 lbs. This is our #1 selling rifle for south eastern hunters.

The medium weight rifles are fitted with a #4 to #6 taper barrel and are typically chosen for their added weight which reduces recoil and stabilizes the rifle when shooting at extended ranges. If you need a 500 yard plus hunting rifle then this weight of rifle is for you. These rifles typically weigh 8.5- 10 lbs.

Heavy weight rifles are the popular choice of varmint hunters because of their massive weight. This added weight comes from their #7- 1.250 straight taper barrels. All of this added weight causes these rifles to sit on your rest like a steel anvil. This obviously will aid considerably to the rifles stability for shooting at extreme ranges while also slowing down the barrel heating process when you get surrounded by a pack of angry prairie dogs. This rifle's weight is in excess of 10 lbs.

Hunting

Genesis Hunter
